JURY SELECTED FOR THE PHILBROOK MURDER CASE

After a number of continuances and other delays, the trial of Frank Philbrook, charged with the murder of Patrick Quigley, January 18, 1916, was taken up in Judge Nathan J. Harris' division of the district court this morning. The state was represented by District Attorney John C. Davis and County Attorney Joseph Evans as associate counsel. Philbrook was represented by Attorney Soren K. Christensen of Salt Lake.

Under a recent enactment of law, the court empanels the jury in criminal cases and Judge Harris immediately took up that task after the talesmen had qualified as jurymen, the line of questioning being about the same as is usually followed by attorneys. In first degree murder cases, such as the Philbrook case, it is required that twelve men be called.

David J. Johns, Carl Redfield, Joseph Bullough, Solomon Shupe, W. D. Ellis, J. B. Trimble, R. H. Butts, Levi J. Taylor, William Gould, Merlin Bartholomew, Lyman Parker and J. W. Ramey were the first twelve called to the jury box, Mr. Redfield and Mrs. Ramey being excused for cause, as each of them stated that he had an unusual opinion of the guilty or innocence of the defendant. Robert Smith and John E. Williams were called to fill the box.

Others excused for cause were Lyman Parker, J. W. Ramey and Robert Smith, James R. Purdy, Arthur West and Edward D. Sanders.

The case recalls the incident of the officers discovering the dead body of Patrick Quigley, a miner, on the morning of January 18, at the rear of the Senate Cafe, restaurant, on Twenty-fifth street, between Washington and Hudson avenues. It was surmised that the old gentleman had been poisoned and investigations were made by the police department and the sheriff's office, the result being the arrest of Frank Philbrook, James O'Brien, Richard Powers and Mrs. Fannie Dawson, only Philbrook being charged with the crime, however. The other parties have been retained as witnesses against Philbrook.

The information against Philbrook alleges that, on January 18, or during the night of January 17, he administered some kind of poison to Quigley, from the effects of which the man soon died.

The story told at the preliminary hearing was to the effect that Quigley was the guest of Philbrook at the Fannie Dawson rooming house, near where the dead body of Quigley was found, and that Philbrook served him with beer, which made him sick. He was taken to his room, where he died. Soon after midnight, the testimony showed, Philbrook and O'Brien carried the old man's body down a flight of stairs at the rear of the rooming house and left it at the rear of the cafe, Powers also being implicated in the gruesome work.

The court having granted Attorney Christensen permission to examine the jurors, when the case was resumed this afternoon, the attorney entered into a detailed and extended questioning of the twelve men in the jury box. It is likely that most of the afternoon will be taken up before the jury is empaneled.

It is stated by the district attorney that the first witnesses for the state will be the undertaker who took charge of the body of Patrick Quigley, and the officers who discovered the body at the rear of the cafe.

Aside from the jurymen, there have been but few people in attendance at the trial.

THEATERS

Two capacity audiences greeted the film production of "Silver Threads Among the Gold" last night at the Orpheum theatre and heard Richard J. Jose, the dean of American contra-tenors, sing the old-time songs incidental to the story. While the voice of the veteran singer, who for years held an enviable position in the hearts of the public through his singing of "Silver Threads Among the Gold," "In the Gloaming," "Dear Old Girl" and kindred songs, has lost considerable of its stability and quality in the middle register, his singing last night was enjoyed and applauded.

Mr. Jose is also featured in a leading role in the film drama, which tells an interesting story.

JURY INDICTS CAPT. VON PAPAN

Recalled German Attache Named as Co-Conspirator in Plot to Blow Up Welland Canal.

New York, April 17.—Captain Franz von Papan, recalled German military attache to the German embassy at Washington, today was indicted by the federal grand jury in connection with the alleged plot to blow up the Welland canal in September, 1914.

Capt. von Papan was one of five persons indicted in the case, including Captain Hans Tauscher, who is already under arrest charged with being concerned in the plot.

The orders were an outgrowth of the famous intermountain rate cases, in which the supreme court upheld the right of the commission to divide the country into zones and adjust long and short hauls accordingly.

After the supreme court's decision, the transcontinental railroads applied for the privilege of charging lower rates on hauls on a large number of articles to 132 cities on the Pacific coast, known as Pacific coast terminals, than was charged on hauls to intermediate cities. The commission investigated the application, particularly with regard to the effect of the opening of the Panama canal. It
